

Intimacy and love weekend Amsterdam March 23, 24 and 25.

Intimacy is the awareness of essence in oneself. The deepest connection to this truth always manifests as love, which is expressed as creativity, joy, and passion. Would you like more love (creativity, joy, and passion) in your life? Then it is time for more personal intimacy. The first step in going deeper into love is to find out what love is for you. This is not the same as what you say love is. That is just a mental repetition of what we have all been taught about love.

What love is to you is the sum total of emotions, experiences, and circumstances that arise in your personal relationships. That starts with your mother, father, and siblings . . . and has repeated itself for as long as you have been alive. This pattern, unfortunately, is almost entirely unconscious driven, which means it is happening without your awareness of it. It is much like your breathing. It just keeps on functioning as a reflection of your hidden expectations of it.

Want to change cycles that no longer serve you in your relationships? Would you like to experience a new type of love with a new type of partnership? Want to find your “soul mate”? Then come join us for this special event and bring clarity to some of the your burning questions about love, relationships, and sexuality.

This weekend event offers a safe environment to go deeper into the desires of your heart. It is a progressive and carefully designed program that includes: lectures, introspective activities, experiential life force sessions, open discussions, and much more! Two of the most valued techniques offered involve the integrative forces of breath and sexuality energy.

What is the purpose of breath and sexuality?

Breath is the animating force that allows each individual to stay alive and experience this material world. It is our primary life force as humans. The second way in which the life force flows through all life is through the magnetism of sexual energy. Without it, there would be no continuation of humanity. Sexuality is powerful and has the potential to create new life. It is also the unseen motivator behind relationships, because it pulls people together. Breath and sexuality are two ends of the same continuum, and when these forces are used together, there is potential for harmony and balance, which is what everyone is looking for.
